NEW LENOX FATHERS PRODUCE ENTERTAINING PTA PROGRAM

Last Tuesday evening the Fathers really took over the New Lenox PTA meeting and produced not only an entertaining program but a lunch that needs mentioning. Two movies were shown, The Marines in Action and the pictures of the actual invasion of Sicily. These pictures painted clearly to every one the hardships those on the front line must face. It gives us the urge to do whatever we can at home so, that at least we may give the boys over there the support they must have.

Dads, we won't forget those man sized, huge sandwiches you served. To even see a ham sandwich again was a treat. Which of you Dads made those delicious cakes? They tasted like the ladies had a hand in making them but then maybe they only supervised the job. We liked your table arrangement too—the little man sitting in a boat with a sign accompanying him "Man at Work." Thanks Dads for coming thru with such a grand program.

NEW LENOX GARDEN CLUB SHOWS COLORED MOVIES OF LOCAL GARDENS

Colored movies of some of the New Lenox gardens were the main features at the January meeting of the New Lenox Garden Club at the home of Mrs. L. E. Frey. Some of the pictures shown put the professionals to shame. Especially the shots of Frank Vally's tulips and Les Brownlee's garden in July. A complete film of Lilac at Lombard was shown and gave those who have not as yet had the opportunity of seeing the hundreds of different lilac trees in bloom, an idea of its stupendous beauty. The American Flag waving in the breeze, with the blue sky for its background, and the faintly tinted lilacs around it, was an extremely beautiful shot.

Thanks Mrs. Brownlee for the use of your projector and giving the club the opportunity of enjoying these films. Thanks to Mrs. Shael for the loads of tiny sandwiches you made. We know how your morning of club was spent. Not only may we mention Mrs. Frey's delectable coffee but also her quaint table arrangement of bright orange bitter-sweet nestled among evergreen branches. It was a most enjoyable and entertaining meeting.

He graphically outlined the great trend of youth delinquency of the present day and showed that 85 per cent of the boys sent to the St. Charles, Illinois school for boys turned out to be worse criminals than before. It is said only 15 out of every 100 boys are actually reclaimed from crime.

Rev. Mr. Tope also showed how very important it is that the religious life be sustained and that a larger and better church attendance is also a crying need of the day.

Rev. Mr. Tope outlined the good work the National Civic Federation is doing in combating youth delinquency.

JOHN DEERE DAY TO BE OBSERVED IN TINLEY JANUARY 25.

How to keep farm machinery in fighting trim is the keynote of the special free motion picture program sponsored by Mr. Henry Bechstein, Tinley Park, which will be shown on January 25, at 7:30 pm at the school auditorium.

"Every farmer, farm boy, or farm helper who works with tractors or other farm machinery, regardless of its make, is especially invited to attend this motion picture show," says Mr. Bechstein. "He is assured of getting much worthwhile information on the care, repair and servicing of farm equipment."

"Featured on the program is War time Care of Your Tractor a talking picture which covers every angle of tractor servicing and care," says Mr. Bechstein. "It has plenty of worth while pointers for every farmer, no matter what make of tractor he owns."

Talking pictures on adjusting and servicing mowers, combines, and planters, plus a picture of hitching and belting of farm machines, are also on the program. An interesting newsreel showing action on the battlefronts of the world and on the production lines at home is included.

"We feel that this show is of direct benefit to the war effort," says Mr. Bechstein. "With a severe manpower shortage and a lack of sufficient new equipment for 1944, the farmers of America have a real job ahead if they are to meet production goals. Every piece of farm equipment must be kept in tip-top shape to prevent delays and crop losses. This show will help every farmer with his equipment problems."

"Be sure to 'share the ride' with your friends and neighbors to save gasoline and rubber, but be sure to come to this instructional program," says Mr. Bechstein.

While this show is largely a man's show, women who are interested are cordially invited to attend, according to Mr. Bechstein.

Driver Has Narrow Escape From Death When Car Hits Truck

J. Pusateri, of Chicago, driver for the F. Landon Cartage Co., had a narrow escape from being killed Thursday afternoon while unloading a paper shipment at the News-Bulletin office. The truck was parked in front of the newspaper office and the driver had just come out of the office and was walking toward the truck when a red Pontiac coupe being driven by A. C. Bender, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. H. Bender of Mokena got out of control and headed straight for the rear of the truck. In the crash a part of an ornament on the hood of the coupe broke off and struck the Landon man in the back. The coupe was very badly smashed and it is estimated the damage to the coupe will be about $300. The Bender boy who is 14 years old, figured in another collision Wednesday when the Bender Car and another car belonging to Adolph Steen of Mokena collided.

FARMERS DOING CUSTOM WORK MUST FILE CHARGES

Every farmer doing custom work must file the charge which he charges for his services. More than a score of operations come under the regulation controlling prices for custom works on farms. If persons who are buying this type of service feel they are being overcharged, they may call the price division of their War Price and Rationing Board and secure the correct price that the seller of such services is permitted to charge.

The Regulation states: All "persons" who "sell" or supply services on equipment, maintenance, rental or repair of, should have filed not later than July 1, 1942 a schedule of their service charges with the Price Division of the War Price and Rationing Board having Jurisdiction over the community in which they are supplying and selling such service, and the prices filed should have been the prices charged by the seller during March, 1942 and the prices filed are the Maximum prices that can be charged by that seller for that type of service.

Regulation No. 165 Section 1499-101 Paragraph C Sub Paragraph 23 specifically places the shelling and picking of corn by mechanical devices under its provisions. All persons performing services covered by this regulation, as previously stated, were required to file their March 1942 prices and they are still the ceiling prices for those services.

We will appreciate your running this news bulletin in your paper as it is very important that the farmer file his services for this type of work if he has not filed to date. War Price and Rationing Board 6299-1, Joliet, Ill.

Tinley To Vote On School Playground Project

A referendum will be held February 5th in the school district 146, Tinley Park, to determine the desire of the voters with regard to the purchase by the district of two lots and house North and adjoining the present school property. The land is badly needed as a playground for the children.

At the present time the playground consists of merely 50 feet on the East side of the school. Approximately 300 children use this space. Since it has been very inadequate to meet the needs of the school the streets have been blocked and the children have used these as playground.

The State Office of Education recommends 200 square feet per child to be used as playground. The school at the present time has just a little over 30 square feet per child.

The additional property will not meet the recommendation of the State Office but it will indicate to the State Superintendent the willingness of the district to comply and thus keep the high recognition the school now has with the State Office.

Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON AND WAR'S END
Washington officials who watch the trend of the war admit now privately that "things will happen very fast" in the next few months. If pressed, they even make flat predictions that Germany will fold before summer.

Publicly, they stick to the line that it will be a long war. This is the only sound position to take, as an official line, since no war can be successfully waged if the people spend their time peeping around the corner for the approach of peace.

But the facts allow a hopeful expectation. Unquestionably the invasion of Europe will be a winter invasion. For many reasons, spring will be too late. February is the likeliest month. The exact time will be no secret to the Nazis, because we will be pounding the French coast well in advance.

The offensive will be a tremendous operation, combining a cross-channel invasion with heavy drives from Russia and Italy, plus all-out air attacks everywhere. (The Balkan invasion urged by Churchill is doubtful.)

Some experts go as far as to name the length of time—in days—which this big operation will require, before the end. One highly placed official says it will take three months and twenty days. Thus, if the invasion starts by mid-February, this would mean the end by early June.

But military experts won't say such things out loud, because they fear the U. S. public will overlook the fact that the days between February and June will be the bloodiest days in the history of all the world's wars.

ARMY POSTAL SERVICE

On a recent visit to the front lines, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark found a soldier busy scribbling a V-mail letter on his mess-kit. The soldier looked as though he had lost his last friend, so General Clark asked him what was wrong.

"Oh, I'm getting a little weary of this life, sir," replied the soldier. "What's your trouble?" asked General Clark.

"Why, I haven't received a letter in five days, General," replied the soldier. "What does the post office department think we are over here—a bunch of archeologists?"

"Personally, I think five days is pretty good service from the United States to the front lines, son," replied Clark. "But I'll talk to the postal service officials and see if you can't get your love letters quicker. I see your point, soldier."

VETERANS EXPAND

The Ramspeck committee investigating civil service has spent most of its time trimming the numbers of government workers. But it has now stumbled into a situation requiring a complete change of policy.

The Veterans administration, instead of submitting to a reduction of personnel, is asking for more—thousands more. Men are being discharged from military service so fast that the task of Veterans administration is going up like a skyrocket. Now employing 45,000 workers all over the country, V. A. will soon have to double its staff.

BACK TO PEACETIME INDUSTRY

Donald Nelson is engaged in a behind-the-scenes race with Elder Statesman Bernie Baruch to work out plans for the reconversion of American industry and see who can get it done first. This was behind the war production board meeting last week when Nelson called in his top aides and outlined a big post-war program of civilian production.

Nelson wants plans for the change-over of industry to begin at once. This does not mean the actual reconversion of factories, since a lot of them may be busy on war orders for some time. But it does mean full speed ahead on plans for reconversion.

This may provide one clue on how soon the administration expects the war to be over in Europe.

However, insiders who know something about personal rivalries of Washington, see in it also the desire of Donald Nelson to grab the ball away from Baruch and "Assistant President" Jimmie Byrnes. These two long have wanted to get Nelson out, and at one time FDR actually signed a letter appointing Baruch chairman of a special committee to take over all war production.

Note: Before Nelson got busy on reconversion, Baruch had been asked by the White House to study plans for converting industry back to a peace basis.

Pure-Bred Sires Help Conserve Feed

Better Grade Animals Give Higher Return

Marketing inferior animals and the use of improved sires will help in partially solving the feed shortage and at the same time bring great improvement in livestock development, says E. H. Hostetler, in charge of animal industry research for the North Carolina state college experiment station.

A recent test shows that when nondescript cows were bred to a purebred bull, their calves averaged 53 pounds heavier at weaning time. In the feed lot, these calves required less feed per unit of gain and made cheaper gains than those calves produced from bulls and cows of inferior breeding.

Furthermore, the carcasses of the cattle sired by the purebred bull were fatter and contained a higher percentage of tender meat.

Hostetler suggests that the sow of poor conformation and those consistently producing small litters be sent to market. The beef animal that is a "shy breeder" or below the average quality of the herd can be sent to the butcher.

Good sires cost money and there is often a question in the mind of many cattle growers as to how much they are really worth. In the test referred to above the purebred bull added about $10 more per head to the value of the calves and with a herd of 25 cows the annual return on the bull would be about $250 as compared with an inferior bull.

In poultry farming, too, superior sires are worth the cost. The importance of good cockerels can be shown by citing the performance of two birds when mated with two separate hens. Male No. 40 had 86 daughters whose average annual production was 186 eggs. Male No. 4815 had 146 daughters who averaged 249 eggs per year. Each daughter of Male No. 4815 laid, on average, 63 more eggs than the daughters of Male No. 40. At 45 cents per dozen for ungraded eggs, each daughter of Male No. 4815 produced $2.26 more income than the daughters of Male No. 40.

Neither of these two males was rated above the other in appearance and handling qualities, and their dams had laid about the same number of eggs. Actually, No. 40's dam laid 282 eggs and No. 4815's dam laid 246 eggs. The difference was that No. 4815 was from a family which had been tested for several years by the performance of entire groups of sisters without culling.

Many other instances could be cited, offering further proof that superior males will pay in any kind of animal husbandry.

Midget Bull

"Mr. Pee Wee," believed to be the smallest bull in the world, weighs 260 pounds, and stands only 34 inches high. He is a cross bred Jersey and Holstein, and is four years old. Stockmen say he is perfectly proportioned and normal.

'Off-Flavor' in Pork

Properly processed tankage, when fed to hogs, will in no way cause an off flavor of the meat. The same is true for properly processed fish meal. In the case of feeding fish, however, where there is a high oil content, this will cause the development of an off, or rancid, flavor in the meat.

Farm Notes

WFA points out that farmers can save money and at the same time make a substantial contribution to the war effort by buying higher analysis fertilizers.

A Flared Skirt for Your Dressing Table

How to cut a flared dressing table skirt without fullness at the top, is something worth knowing. You may be making a smartly tailored affair of white pique with pink bindings and buttons, like the one shown here.

The diagram shows how to make a pattern for half of the skirt. The center front may be placed on a fold of the goods in cutting if there is no front opening. Cut the paper by the dimensions in the diagram. Mark point A in 14-inches from the upper left corner. Measure up from the lower right corner a distance equaling the length of the skirt from A to the left edge of the paper and mark point C. Connect these points with lines drawn, as shown.

NOTE—There are three other interesting styles of dressing tables with detailed directions for making in SEWING Book 1. Also slip covers, draw curtains, and numerous household articles. Copy of BOOK 1 will be mailed for 15 cents. Address:

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder. DOAN'S PILLS

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Elsa Chatfield is disinherited by her Aunt Kitty who died of an overdose of morphine. Hunt Rogers and Barry Madison go to Mexico to solve what they believe to be Aunt Kitty's murder. On arriving they find that Elsa's party has preceded them by plane. James Chesebro is murdered, Elsa's father, Sam, meets death from the sword of a marlin when his chair breaks, toppling him into the sea, and George Rumble, a member of the fishing party, is fished out of the sea near the dock. Police chief Lombardo conducts the investigation into these deaths. Reed Barton asks what they were doing with his fishing knife and learns that this is the knife that killed George Rumble.

CHAPTER XVII

"Practically all," he said. "I think if we were to sort them out properly we could go a long way toward a solution. Perhaps not all the way. We can settle upon several pertinent facts—clues that point toward the solution."

"What are they?" Rogers was silent for some moments, turning over in his mind the answer to my question. "I'll name one thing," he began. "It is more important than any other—the picture of Elsa and the baby in the Los Angeles paper." He did not go on for some moments, then he said: "What Chesebro did or said to Elsa that so enraged her interests me very much too. The knife that killed Chesebro is a clue I'd like to discover."

"Are those all?" I asked when he ceased speaking.

He did not reply at once. I felt that something had come over him, some new thought had struck him. In the darkness that shrouded us I could sense that he was vitally alive to something, some new phase of our problem which had electrified him. I waited with growing impatience, afraid to startle him with any word of mine.

"Barry—the black sombrero!" he said suddenly. He didn't speak again for several moments, then he said: "There's an amazing story here! Incredible! I see it only dimly yet."

Inside Berta, Margaret and Dwight were attempting a three-handed game of bridge—killing slow time, as it were, in the hope that tomorrow would be a brighter day. Rogers, now that I could observe him in the light of the living room lamps, betrayed none of that impulsive energy which in the darkness I fancied he possessed. He was as casual as if he had tired of being out of doors and had come inside for company. He walked about the table, examining the cards each of the players held. Margaret was playing the hand. She fished through Dwight.

"Senora," began Rogers addressing Berta abruptly, "did you not come ashore from the Orizaba that evening prior to our fishing trip?"

"Yes, senor," she replied after a moment's hesitation. "But only to the—muelle—the wharf, with Arturo."

"Yes?"

"It is because I have forgotten a promise, senor, to my husband. I should bring his fishing things, his harness, and his belt and knife. And I forgot. When I remember it I go ashore to find somebody to send with a note to the rancho for them."

"Did you find someone?"

"Oh, yes. Two boys. I send them in a taxi."

"Did you wait for their return?"

"No, senor. I go back to the boat and Arturo brings the things to me later."

"Did you see Senor Rumble on the wharf, senora?"

"No, senor. I see no one."

"What time was it?"

"That I do not know, senor. I do not think it is very late."

The cards by now were abandoned and the players moved to more comfortable chairs. Doctor Cruz appeared in the doorway and behind him Lombardo. They came in and we greeted them. I wondered what their mission was. Rogers continued to stand. His gaze was restless; he seemed to fix upon Elsa's small black hat, which still lay on the table against the wall, with a sort of satisfaction, although I couldn't understand why.

"Elsa has retired?" he inquired.

"Oh, no; she and Reed are around somewhere," Margaret answered.

At that moment Elsa, followed by Reed Barton, appeared at the study door.

"Did I hear my name mentioned?" she called.

"Hunt Rogers was worrying about you," I said.

"But I wasn't," Rogers objected.

"I merely inquired what had become of you. I'd not seen you since dinner."

In the brief moments of this conversation, Rogers had walked a few steps toward Elsa. The table where her hat lay was close at hand. He reached out of a sudden and picked up the quilt which lay partly concealed underneath it, and held it up before his eyes as if studying the knob with the carved head. Elsa continued to walk toward him. Somehow Rogers had managed to center our gaze upon what he was doing. I found myself staring slightly at the quilt. It brought back to mind that vivid scene of Elsa racing madly toward the house, of her horse suddenly checked and the descending lash upon the unsuspecting Chesebro. Elsa's eyes were now fixed upon what Rogers was doing; a sort of fascination gripped her.

"I've been wondering," said Rogers with a faint smile, "what I might find concealed in this thing." He twisted at the knob. It was the wrong way. He reversed the pressure, and the knob slipped slightly like a screw. To my amazement he pulled the knob loose from the handle of the quilt, drawing with it from its concealment a long, thin-bladed knife of finely tempered steel.

"You must have had a very great provocation that morning to murder," Rogers' voice hardened at a trifle.

"More than you realize," Elsa flashed. She seemed to stand taller, her gray eyes turned full upon Rogers.

"If I had to guess what that provocation was," began Rogers, as if he were feeling his way into a dark room and would welcome a light, "I should hazard that it had something to do with the picture of you and the baby." He paused for a fraction of a second, as if giving Elsa an opportunity to speak, then went on: "The child bore a very strong likeness to Jimmy the Cheese. I assume that he was the father."

"You are correct," said Elsa with dignity.

"George Rumble, after the picture of you and the child appeared in the paper, told me something which rather cleared him of any intent of wrongdoing," Rogers went on. "He said he first saw that picture of you and the baby at your Aunt Kitty's."

"Barry—the black sombrero!"

He asked her about it and your aunt told him that it was your baby—

"She lied!" Elsa flashed. "I'm not the mother of that baby!" she said fiercely. She added more softly:

"I'm glad, though, you told me how George got his information. I never asked him."

Something like a sigh of relief seemed to stir in the room. Elsa stood firmly, defiantly before Rogers, flanked by Reed Barton. Berta sat forward in her seat, an eagerness in her manner, something trembling on her lips. Rogers asked, "Who was the mother, Elsa?"

"Aunt Kitty!"

"Please, may I say something?" said Berta quickly.

"Of course, senora," Rogers turned to her.

"There are some things I should tell," she began in her precise English. "Elsa does not know I know these facts; my husband did not know I had so much knowledge. But my cousin, Maria Mendez, who is a nurse at the hospital, told me. Aunt Kitty's child was born in the hospital here at Mazatlan. She came secretly here, wanting to be near her brother, and yet for some strange reason not telling him she was even in the town until after the child was born."

"Later, on a steamer day, she sent word, pretending that she had come ashore for the few hours the steamer stopped. She explained the child by saying its mother had died at sea and she expected to adopt it. Sam went to see her," Berta went on rapidly, a deep fire in her eyes.

"She would not come to the rancho, because of me. She would not even permit him to tell me anything about her being here at the time. Only after Maria had told me later something of what had happened, did I learn about it from Sam. But he made me promise never to talk of it. Things, of course—she gestured vehemently with her small, ivory-tinted hands—"are different now. It is time to talk."

"You are right, Senora Chatfield," said Rogers. "It is time to talk."

He turned to Elsa, a questioning look in his mild blue eyes, and seemed to wait for some word from her.

Elsa had listened to Berta without a change of expression. She now looked at Rogers steadily, her level gray eyes fixed upon his; the lines had smoothed out of her face; her voice when next she spoke was quite calm.

"Perhaps you're right, both of you," she said. "Having kept still so long, however, it really makes little difference with me now." She continued to stand before Rogers as if answering to him, ignoring the others who sat silently in their chairs.

"I ran away from school in the East. I went to New York, because I'd decided to be an artist. Father knew what I'd done and approved it. I didn't tell Aunt Kitty and she didn't know where I was. After I'd been there nearly a year father one day telegraphed me that Aunt Kitty needed me. That was the first mistake. She never needed anybody. But just the same I flew to San Francisco. I was seventeen, and I didn't have any sense."

Rogers interrupted her. "Won't you sit down, Elsa?"

She smiled at him. "No, thank you," she answered, continuing to stand easily before us. "I met Aunt Kitty when she got off the boat with the baby. Father had written me at San Francisco, telling me what he believed was the truth. I'd had only the telegram. Of course, I was sort of stunned; nothing like this had ever happened to our family. I was very frank to say so; she had it coming to her after the way she'd brought me up. Aunt Kitty turned on me so fiercely I thought she was going to strike me. She denied it was her child. She said Father had lied to me. It was a baby she was going to adopt. But I stuck to the point like the little fool I was. I threatened to kidnap the child and go home with it and announce it as my own, just to shame her. That was the second mistake. I didn't carry out my threat, but it was only because I couldn't get the child away from her."

"You returned home together, then, you and your aunt?" Rogers suggested.

"Yes. I'd used up all my money in going to San Francisco, and father couldn't send me any more at that time. Aunt Kitty would not give me any to go back to New York. She'd buy me anything I wanted, though, in the way of clothing. She'd never been really generous. I couldn't understand it now. I thought before this that I'd hated her, but we were really only beginning to hate each other."

"Then one day I woke up to what had happened to me. Odd how you can be the center of gossip and never hear a whisper of it. It's like being in the center of a hurricane, everything is so quiet. Months had passed before the maid one day said something to me about 'my baby.' I was furious. I went to Aunt Kitty. She laughed. 'The whole town thinks it's yours,' she said. She laughed again. 'And it's going to be yours. You can't prove it's not. You ran away from school, so the school authorities can't help you deny it. It comes down to your word and mine, and mine will be believed before yours. So what?'"

"There I was," said Elsa simply. "What could I do? She had me, and I knew it. So all I could do was to go on hating her more and more. When the baby died—it didn't make any difference. I could only go on as I had been going, hating her with every breath I drew, and hoping to live it down some day."

"Tell me now about Chesebro and what happened the other day," instructed Rogers matter-of-factly.

Elsa laughed shortly, but there was no mirth in her voice. "Elsa, the brilliant caricaturist," she said sarcastically, "never saw that resemblance in the child to Jimmy the Cheese. She had to be told by Jimmy himself in one of his several fantastic proposals of marriage." There was a tinge of scorn in her voice. "He'd made advances to me in his elephantine way ever since Aunt Kitty's death. He didn't seem to mean it until a short time ago. I detested him and I told him so. Then came that picture in the paper. He was very contrite that day we went for a ride. He begged a thousand pardons; he groveled before me—literally. Finally he startled me with the statement that he was the father of the child, and before he was through gabbling he admitted that it was his idea originally and not Aunt Kitty's that the gossip be started at home that the child was mine." Elsa's voice ceased for a moment and then took up again in a quiet, dead level tone.

For several moments none of us realized just what we had heard, or that Elsa had reached the end of her recital. There had been no bitterness in her tone at any time, no emotion until she had come to Chesebro, when something of that immense anger she had shown on that day she turned so savagely upon the man who had been at the bottom of all of her troubles glowed in the fiery pinpoints in her eyes. Rogers' voice startled me when he finally spoke.

"You make that statement of your own free will, do you, Elsa?"

"Why, yes, of course."

JESUS TEACHES IN PARABLES

LESSON TEXT—Mark 4:1-9, 26-32.
GOLDEN TEXT—If any man hath ears to hear, let him hear.—Mark 4:23.

Parables were often used by our Lord, particularly when He had truth to reveal which was not for unbelieving hearts that had hardened themselves against it (see Matt. 13:10-16).

The method is that of telling an earthly story, true to life (hence, not a fable), which is placed alongside of the spiritual truth it is designed to teach. It thus differs from an allegory, which gives the meaning with the story (see John 15:1-6).

Jesus used parables in our lesson to teach the truth that the good seed of the Word of God will be received in various ways and will bring forth widely differing results. He—the Lord—was the Sower, and the field was the world (Matt. 13:37, 38).

We note first that in that field there were and are—

I. Four Kinds of Soil (Mark 4:1-9).

The reception of the seed is determined by the condition of the soil. The great field was essentially of one kind of soil, but it had become widely different in its ability to take in the seed and bear fruit.

The interpretation of this parable is given by our Lord in the verses immediately following (vv. 3-20). It has striking application to our day.

A road, or beaten pathway, was a common thing in the fields of Palestine. On such hard soil a seed found no place to grow, and the birds carried it away. Such is the condition of a man who permits the heavy and sinful traffic of this world to harden his heart against spiritual truth. If our heart has reached that stage we should ask God to break it up. The birds (always a symbol of evil in the Bible) are Satan and his emissaries. They are always busy about carrying away the Word of God when it is truly preached.

The rocky soil was a thin layer of good soil on a rocky ledge. At first this caused rapid growth, but without deep roots it could not survive the heat of summer. This is the one who enthusiastically responds to the gospel appeal, but being without real conviction and repentance, he has no stability when persecution comes.

The thorny ground—where the growing grain was choked by weeds—typifies the professed believer who lives in worldliness. The friend of the world is God's enemy (James 4:4). Note the things which destroy spiritual life (v. 19), and shun them. In the good ground—open to receive and ready to yield itself for the growth of the seed—there is abundant harvest. Even here there is a difference in the amount of fruit. Why not be a "hundredfold" believer?

Changing the picture a little our Lord now speaks of—

II. Normal Growth and a Good Harvest (4:26-29).

This parable, found only in Mark, has a lesson for the sower. He is not to expect the harvest immediately after the time of sowing. There is a period of patient waiting while God is producing the growth (and only He can do it!)—then the joy of harvest.

There are many lessons to learn here. We who serve the Lord in teaching or preaching the Word are too impatient, too eager to be able to announce results. God is always willing that things should mature naturally and in due season. Let us wait for Him and be at rest in our spirits (v. 27).

Then let us be glad as the seed begins to show signs of maturing, but let us not be slow to gather the harvest when it is ready. Some forget to gather the spiritual fruit of their labors, possibly having long since lost patience and interest.

We should also be encouraged by this parable to continue sowing the seed, knowing that it will find place in the hearts of some and bring forth fruit unto eternal life.

Next we are warned to be on our guard against accepting or approving—

III. Abnormal Growth and an Evil Harvest (4:30-32).

The mustard is an herb, not a tree; hence this parable gave warning that there would be an overgrown religious system calling itself Christian. The birds are (as in the parable of the kinds of soil) evil men, or "isms," or organizations eager to take shelter in a religious system without spiritual power.

The church had such an abnormal growth when Constantine espoused Christianity as a political move, mixed it with paganism, and elevated it to a position of worldly power.

All this was and still is contrary to God's plan for the church. He wanted a spiritual body distinguished by lowliness, meekness and service. These are the things that mark the true Christian spirit. The marks of true Christianity are always those of likeness to Him who said: "I am meek and lowly in heart," who came "not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Immense Apartment Has 54 Rooms With 17 Baths

A New York city apartment, vacant and with no prospects of being rented owing to its size, cannot be made into smaller apartments because the cost would be about 250 times the ceiling of $1,000 which has been placed on a building alteration, says Collier's.

Occupying three floors, this home contains 54 rooms, 17 baths, 31 closets, 68 house telephones, a 10,000-bottle wine safe, a dining hall to accommodate 200 guests and a large refrigerated vault for the storage of flowers for parties.

If you were to say the first bugle call of the day in the Army is "Reveille"—you'd be wrong. It's "First Call." But you probably know what cigarette gets first call with Army men—it's Camel. And Camel is the favorite with men in all branches of the service—Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, too. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are. —Adv.

SERVICEMEN'S NEWS

Sicily, Dec. 4, 1943

Dear Friends: I went to thank each and every one of you for your swell Christmas pkg. It is a dandy. You folks at home are sure doing your best to brighten up the holidays for us fellows over here. I think I can safely say that we all appreciate it to. I sure hope I can thank you in person before another year passes.

There's not much I can write about except the weather and one word will describe that. "Rain!" These people sure get their share of rain during the winter season. The sun is still warm when it shines but otherwise the air gets pretty chilly. It gets very cold at night. Oh, what I wouldn't give for some good old USA weather for a change. Snow when it's supposed to snow, Spring, Summer, Fall and winter in real USA style. The fellow that said "There's no place like home" sure knew what he was talking about. Thanks again, everyone. I appreciate your thoughtfulness very much.

Your neighbor,
Sgt. W. H. Sterberg, APO 760, care postmaster, New York. Dec. 6, 1943

Gentlemen: Received your little note and was quite surprised to find the check. I have put it to good use, as most service people do. It was quite a surprise. As yet, I haven't received the Times although I'm expecting it any day. It is really lovely here today. I've finished my morning duty and had the rest of the day off. All of the girls from the north are singing "White Christmas" in a long sort of a way. There is absolutely no limit of rain or snow here and flowers blooming all around. It was quite a sight to see all of the boots go out on their liberty. They really have a look of anticipation on their face. Ferry rides, lake cruise etc. The other day we SPARs were invited to the late Sir Henry Oakes estate and it really is a wonderful place. We certainly enjoyed ourselves.

Thanking you again,
Irene Lahti, Palm Beach, Fla. Nov. 24, 1943

Dear Friends: I received your most welcome Christmas package and also the snapshot of the honor roll, and wish to thank everybody who made those packages possible. They were swell. I have met a few of the fellows since I've been down here and hope to meet somebody from home. In closing I would like to wish all my friends a Happy New Year and hope to see you all next year sometime.

Fred Meyer, New York. Dec. 19, 1943
To Citizen Service Comm.

I would like to thank you for the very nice Christmas box. Everything will come in very handy. The weather out here in California is nothing to brag about at this time of the year. I have finished boot camp and have been in advanced training for a week. Things aren't so bad, it is a little hard in the beginning but it isn't bad. Thanks again for the Christmas box.

As Always,

Greetings from North Africa: I really hope that the other Tinley Servicemen and women spent a more pleasant holiday week. Our mail is slow and crowded so I haven't received a paper from Tinley Park since the first of December. I hope they come thru soon. I and some of the others really enjoy reading them. There are also many more uses for newspapers here after everyone has read it. I haven't any more space so till next time thanks and Best wishes.

College of Agriculture. They are outstanding source of iron, one of the minerals in which our diets are likely to be low, and they are also rich in calcium and phosphorus. The proteins of both the white and the yolk are of good quality and, when it comes to vitamins, A, B1 B2 and D are all represented.

There are scores of interesting things to do with them besides, boil fry and scramble them. Omelets are neither difficult or time consuming to prepare and many people like them. Souffles are delicious for any meal of the day. Eggs combine well with many other foods in sauces and in creamed and escalloped dishes. They can be used, too, in a great variety of desserts, salads and sandwiches.

Eggs like most other foods need care in cooking. One general rule to keep in mind, whatever the method used, is to cook them slowly and over moderate or low heat. Cooking at high temperature or for too long a period tends to make them tough and leathery.

One thing we've done to maintain good telephone service—all up and down our territory—and still meet war needs is to bring back from storage many of the old-style upright telephones. They are just as reliable, just as serviceable as the newer hand sets.

Our whole program has been one of redesign and research and reuse, to save war-vital materials. This work began before Pearl Harbor and has been stepped up progressively ever since. We've saved many thousands of pounds of copper and other materials. We've been able to salvage vast amounts of critical metals and still keep telephone service at a high standard.

And we intend to stay on top of that job, doing our best to give everyone all the service there is. . . Fast service! Efficient service! Service with a smile!

You, personally, have an important job in winning the war—buying War Bonds. It's not glamorous—no, not even a sacrifice, really, because you are only lending your money, to be returned with interest. But it is essential to complete victory.

Your part in this year of decision is at least one extra $100 Bond, above your regular Bond buying. That is your minimum individual quota. But don't stop there. Remember wars are won only by all-out effort. So buy $200, $300, $500 worth—buy more than you can afford. And buy your Bonds where you work—at the plant or at the office.

Your country is counting on you—let's make the year of decision OUR year!

This sticker in your window means you have bought 4th War Loan securities.

Baked for "Bombers Over Berlin"

Like fancy pastries produced by a baker who is a master of his art, these cores for molds into which magnesium is poured to cast aircraft engine parts, are ready for the oven at the magnesium foundry of the Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors. "Sculptured" of special core sand, these units are hardened, then aligned inside the molds to create the forms for the casting of intricate aircraft engine parts from molten magnesium.

Electric Power
Gun Power

Right now these huge 155 mm. Howitzers are blasting the enemy positions in Italy. And you'll hear of these guns on many more fronts throughout the world. For on the home front, Electric Power is on the job day and night helping to produce these mighty Howitzers on a volume scale.

Here in Northern Illinois, where the carriage of this artillery piece is manufactured, Electric Power not only speeds production but also makes possible a new and modern method of inspection. The part is magnetized, metal filings are blown on the magnetized area and the Electric Magnaflex Machine immediately reveals any crack or flaw.

Supplying Electric Power to the war plant turning out Howitzer carriages and to all other war production plants in this area is our job. And to it our facilities and resources are devoted.

In the Northern Illinois plant producing the 155 mm. Howitzer carriages, the Electric X-Ray Machine is used to make sure component parts have no sub-surface defects.

Electric Welding of hinge onto the trail body of the Howitzer carriage assures construction to withstand the heavy load and rough riding on the battlefield.

Here the electrically-operated Magnaflex machine is used for magnetic inspection of weldments on the carriage of the huge artillery piece.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

Herman C. Grassle Is Candidate For Renomination

Herman C. Grassle today officially announced that he will come before the voters of Will County at the primaries on April 11, as a candidate for renomination for the office of County Auditor on the Republican ticket to succeed himself.

The announcement comes after Mr. Grassle has made a survey of the County, conferring with all members of the County Central Committee and many political leaders, all of whom have offered only words of the highest commendation for the manner in which he has conducted the affairs of his office during his incumbency, playing no small part in the maintenance of the financial record of Will County as second to no other in the state.

"Will County is big business," said a County leader in speaking of the office of County Auditor. "Approximately five and one-half million dollars are annually required for the conduct of its business. That every dollar of this shall properly serve the purpose for which it is needed is the duty of the office of the County Auditor. Herman Grassle has made an enviable record, auditing, checking and verifying receipts and expenditures of all of the County departments and its institutions, holding a guiding hand over all financial matters and assuring the taxpayers that they shall receive one hundred cents in value for every dollar expended.

"Herman C. Grassle comes from a pioneer Will County family. His father was the late Fred Grassle, long identified with the baking industry. To use a colloquialism Herman learned to handle 'dough' efficiently.

Observations of this leader is borne out by the fact that recently the representative of a leading national financial concern visited the office of Mr. Grassle to make a check on conditions which would establish the credit of the County. The man made an extended reservation at a leading hotel, expecting the work would take him several days.

Visiting the office of the County Auditor, he was given immediate access to records. Within one hour he was in full possession of information which he expected would take several days to gather. As a result he made the declaration that under Mr. Grassle's method of operating his office, Will County occupies a position second to no other County in Illinois. "I expected to spend several days here going over the records," said the expert to Mr. Grassle. "With the complete records you maintain I have completed my examination in the shortest time of any County I have ever visited."

Mr. Grassle has surrounded himself with a competent and efficient office force, thus producing records, statistics and information not previously available. His office is ready and willing to give at all times to the humblest citizen the most complete information. As one citizen recently remarked: "That's quite a contrast to earlier methods.

Primary Room

The third grade science class finished an interesting lesson on "How to Making Feeding Shelves For Birds." To third grade boys, Bruce Shoop and Lloyd Spiess brought feeding shelves they had made to school. Both shelves were the swing type.

Drawing classes last week made Eskimo scenery. They made a kayak, the Eskimo boat made of sealskins, the dogsled and team, the tupuk, the Eskimo summer home; the winter home called the igloo; and an Eskimo dressed in skins.

Pupil artists for the blackboard scenery this month were Billy Weber, Ronnie Bruggeman, Esther Holms, Helen Rueckert and Doloris Cooper.

Intermediate Department

All of the pupils in the Intermediate Room have begun a new project of "Brushing the Teeth Twice Daily." On a class hygiene chart a record will be kept and when the project is finished, each pupil having a perfect score will receive a beautifully colored certificate as a reward.

The fourth grade enjoyed dramatizing the story "The Golden Goose" which is in the fourth reader. Miss Johnson and the pupils of grade 3 were the guests present.

In reviewing words preparing for the mid-year examinations, a spell-down was given. The winners were as follows: Grade 6, Ursula Thiel and Ralph Yunker. Grade 5, Gene McGuire and James Needham. Grade 4, Beverly Hall and Russell Geuther.

The girls in grade 5 under the leadership of Marianne Whitlark and the boys guided by David Krapp made some fine winter scenes using colored chalk on the black blackboard. This is much admired by all.

Junior High Room

The fourth meeting of the Junior High Literary Club was held Jan. 14th on the stage of the Mokena Public School. Georgia Bennett acted as president and Helen Reid as secretary.

A very fine program of music, recitations and instrumental pieces was given by members of the eighth grade.

The officers to preside at the next meeting will be Rita Tierney as president and Donna Williams as secretary.

High School News

The pupils of the high school are busy this week with their reviews. The semester exams will be given Wednesday and Thursday.

Virginia Calder and Charles Holm are back in school after a week's absence due to illness.

Marion Sizer has been absent for more than a week because of illness. We all wish her a speedy recovery.

Visitors in the High School last week were Fremont Waring, now in the navy, and Alumni Robert McGregor, George Merrick, Billy Steen Lois Mancke, Violet Hurley and Corrine Marti.

Brownie News

The Brownies met last Wednesday after school in the Intermediate Room. New officer were chosen: Donna Bennett, secretary; Marianne Whitlark, treasurer and Betty Beagley, chairman of games. Following this election the girls enjoyed a half hour of games in the gym.

Letters From Boys

Atterbury, Ind.

I received the Christmas gifts you sent. I'm now in Indiana. This is a very nice camp here. I haven't seen much of it yet as I'm in the hospital.

I hope to see a little snow this year so it will really seem like a holiday season. Last year I spent Christmas in Florida. In closing I want to thank you for all those gifts. They sure come in handy.

Sincerely,

Pfc. Ted Zeilstra
This one is from Ted's brother who is somewhere in Italy:

Dear Friends:
I thought I'd drop you a line or two to say hello and also thank you for the nice Xmas package you sent me, which I received yesterday. The many things you sent sure come in handy. I want to thank you and all members for the kind work and thoughtfulness toward us fellows in Service. I know not only me, but all the fellows surely appreciate the work you are doing and have done for us.

We are all working hard and hope we soon can bring Victory back home. There isn't much more news, thanks again for the lovely Xmas package. As ever, Dave Zeilstra.

Just a few lines to let you know that I received your package about 3 weeks ago. I managed to keep it until last night before opening it. It was really a swell package. Everything is something a serviceman can use and won't be excess gear. I am quite fortunate to be in this country this year yet. I rec'd quite a few packages and wish I could have shared them with some fellow overseas. Anyway thanks very much.

The sun is shining now but we have been having showers for the last 24 hours. Post Watch was given 72 hours liberty over Christmas. Starboard will have it over New Year's. I have six 4 hour watches this weekend and will then have off over next weekend.

Here is our Christmas dinner: The chow hall was decorated with trees, bells and other decorations. The menu: fruit cocktail, crisp celery, stuffed olives, mixed sweet pickles, tomato bouillon, roasted stuffed turkey, giblet gravy, apple and raisin dressing, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, french peas, baked spiced ham, candied sweet potatoes, Parker house rolls, butter, fruit cake, hot mince pie, ice cream, mixed nuts, seasonal fruit, mixed hard candy, coffee and cigarettes. Thanks again for the package. So long and may the war end soon.

Wm. Abbe, San Bruno, Calif.

I received your lovely Christmas present just before I left Texas and I want to thank you very much for it. It was grand. Candy always tastes good to a soldier, and it was swell. The other things were also very nice.

I arrived here with my buddies the day before Christmas and many fortunately, were able to get a leave for Christmas. Four of us stayed with and elderly couple in St. Augustine, and the lady invited us for Christmas dinner, so our holiday wasn't bad at all.

We spent the day visiting the sights in and around the city. It is a very beautiful city and the people are very nice. I enjoy traveling around to the various cities, seeing them and meeting the people. It is interesting and also educational.

Since we got to this camp, most of us have been working at the Post Office in Jacksonville, helping out with the mail. Thanking you again for the Christmas present and wishing you all a Happy New Year.

Sincerely, Cpl. Robert Nemeth, Camp Blanding, Fla.

I wish to extend my sincere appreciation to you fine people for remembering me this Christmas. The gifts will all come in handy.

Because of change of rank, due to graduation, I have been able to spend the Holidays with my parents in Mokena. The next nine months I will spend in continued training at Milwaukee County Hospital. This starts January 1, 1944. Thank you again for the many practical gifts and I really appreciate it. Sincerely, Robert W. Rieman, Milwaukee, Wis.

Mr. Wm. Semmler:
Dear Folks: Thanks again for sending me the paper. It sure is swell to be able to get a paper from home and to keep up with the Mokena news.

This out-going Unit is sort of dead, compared to Recruit training. However, we can see more shows and can have 24 hours "liberties" if we are good boys. We will probably be in O.G.U. from a one to six weeks, depending on the needs at schools and at sea.

Thanks again for the News-Bulletin. Hope this finds all at 100 per cent. Best regards,

George Lauffer, Farragut, Ida

Cpl. Spencer J. Hauser of Mokena, Ill., of the Anti-Aircraft Artillery School at Camp Davis, N. C., has just been awarded the Good Conduct Medal by Brigadier Gen. Bryan L. Milburn, commandant of the School, for having completed 3 years of active Federal military service while the United States is at war and having demonstrated exemplary behavior, efficiency and fidelity.

The Good Conduct Ribbon, red in color and three white stripes on each side, will be issued in lieu of the Medal. This award is one that is cherished by all enlisted men in the Army as it is his mark of achieving that much of perfection that is asked of him by his government during wartime.

Paperhangers win three is no longer news as they are winning them with such regularity lately. They increased their lead to three games as they trimmed the Robins.

The Paste Slingers are really giving every team in the league except the Oilers, a pasting, not only that, but they are the most improved team in the league as testified by their soaring averages.

The powerful Mokena Oilers are still keeping pace with the Paperhangers as they downed the Bankers for two games. The Phillips '66' outfit have not lost a series in 7 straight nights. The Smokers took two games from the gasless V-Eighters. The V-Eighters now have won 3 games out of their last 15 games.

I wish to express my thanks for the package which I rec'd yesterday. I sure enjoyed the cake and candy. Some of my shipmates helped me eat them. A box of sweets doesn't last long here as you can imagine.

Rec'd your most welcome package which was never expected. It was very nice, could use everything and the candy was very good and is something we boys crave over here and something we do not get. It made us feel that there is some people back home thinking of us over here in this God forsaken country, 100 years behind the good old U.S.A., and hoping we all will be back soon. As ever, Pfc. Fredrick A. Bettenhausen. Merry Xmas and Happy New Year to all.

Jan. 1, 1944. Hondo, Texas.
I'm starting the New Year by writing to all the people back home and thanking them for their kind remembrances. The fruit cake was especially good, rather reminded me of the ones ma used to make. But I suppose with everything so well rationed it's hard to find the things to put into a cake.

I've already used some of the razor blades, even if I neglect to shave every chance I get. It hardly seems like Christmas to me or rather I should say it didn't seem like Christmas, as I was in Wichita, Kansas, the other day and saw 8 inches of snow and the temperature below 15 degrees. Thought I'd never stop shivering after I got back to Hondo. Guess I'll not say a word when it blows and rains here for a few days, at a time like its been doing the last few days.

You know there is one thing I am wondering about in Orland tho. Isn't there anything happening? Or don't any excitement hit the town, that makes the Orland paper? Its called the Orland Park Herald, but it contains more news of the surrounding towns than of Orland itself. Now I know you're not the editor, but I bet if you mentioned the fact to Mr. Semmler, we boys like news of our own town first, he'd see what can be done about it. We all think its quite a place and are proud to have it first every chance it has. I'm wondering if the slough is frozen hard enough to go skating and is the high basketball team holding its own and I bet those questions are in some other's minds too.

It's time to cut this scribbling for now. But I want to say, thank you again. Maybe next Christmas we'll be eating back in Illinois, instead of down here in Rebel land. Thank you. Cpl. Ralph Kimmel.

Editor's note: Thanks Ralph for you constructive and timely criticism and I hope all our readers will back us up in this work, in which we are very short handed, and send in the news of their family or neighborhood. Course you boys are hungry for word from home and we can't publish it unless we know it, and we nor our correspondent can telephone everybody for their news, and many do not have a telephone either. Share your news. We want it. Call or write our correspondent, Mrs. S. Knox at Orland or me at Mokena or leave your news items at the Reich Ice Cream parlor in Orland by Tuesday afternoon when I am there and will pick them up. Thanks, every body, not just a few. Camp Van Dorn, Miss. Jan. 2, 1944

Rec'd your Christmas package and many thanks. We completed our basic training this last week. This coming week we take our Corp test, then furloughs will follow. Hope to see you all soon. Must close wishing each and everyone of you A Happy New Year. As ever, Pfc. Harold Helenhouse.

That strip of rubber on the inside of the refrigerator door is called a gasket. It deserves the best of care. Strong cleansing agents and grease and oil from the hands are ruinous to rubber. Each time the refrigerator is cleaned, wipe the gasket with a mild solution of baking soda and warm water, using a damp, not wet, cloth.

If soup looks a little on the greasy side, home economists suggest tossing a lettuce leaf into the pot. It will absorb the grease and may be removed as soon as it has done its job.

To simplify mending, look over clothing regularly and watch for needed repairs. It is much easier to reinforce weak places or mend small holes than to wait until major repairs are needed.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The peak of tropical American rubber production, including guayule, was in 1912, when about 62,000 tons were produced in all countries. In 1940 the world's production of rubber was 1,389,695 tons, more than came out of the Amazon Valley in all the years from 1837 to 1939 inclusive.

WE HOLD no grudge against the ballyhoo set up for such younger entries as Col. Matt Winn, 82, Connie Mack, 81, Lonnie Stagg, 81, or Col. Ed Bradley, 83. They have all had more than their share of the headlines for over 60 years.

But we'd like to make another nomination that even tops this list when it comes to the matter of celebrating another New Year. His name is Arlie Latham, now 64 years old, and looking somewhere in the early 60s.

Grantland Rice

Arlie is now a guardian of the press box in New York. But there was a time some 60-odd years ago when he was a star infielder for the St. Louis Browns in the crazy days of Chris von der Ahe. And it was the irrepressible Arlie who contributed his full share to the incipient lunacy of old Chris, one of the rarest characters baseball ever knew.

Arlie Latham came to the Browns around 1880. He was an able infielder, a good clutch hitter, baseball's top clown and also an inspiring entry. Arlie was one of the smartest men that ever played baseball, in any league or at any time. He had a keen, quick wit that dominated any situation where repartee might figure.

From the Browns Latham came to Cincinnati's Reds in company with such famous old timers as Long John Riley, Bid McPhee, Tommy Corcoran, Tip O'Neil, Elton Chamberlain, Tony Mullane, Jim Keenan, Jim Duryea, Billy Earl, Billy Rhines, Germany Smith and others. This old Red team was one of the most colorful casts that baseball has ever known. They were a rather rough and rowdy bunch, in many respects, but they could play baseball—and Arlie was then one of the best.

Looking Back

I first ran across Arlie Latham after he had finished his playing career. This was back in Atlanta in 1903 when Latham was a Southern league umpire. He was something more than an umpire. He was a riot. His quick wit and his sarcastic comeback were much too fast for the ballplayers of 1903—and for that it would have been the same for the ballplayers of 1943.

Arlie came south as umpire at the time the north was sending us such veterans as Gus Weyhing, Theodore Breitenstein, Red Ehret, Amos Rusie, King Bailey and a few others who had been pitching 70 or 80 games a year before the fading soupstone needed a touch of southern sun. The best of the crop that came from the north in those days was Theodore Breitenstein, the "$10,000 beauty," a mighty sum in any sale in those days.

"Breit had a tragic baseball finish," Arlie told me recently. "The most tragic finish baseball ever knew. He was getting on at the time—around 40 or maybe 42. He came to the close of the ninth inning with two men out and a sure no-hit game in sight. Nothing like a hit-up to that spot. One man left. The one man left drove a low liner through the box that broke Breit's ankle, wrecked his no-hit game and closed out his baseball career."

"They were a grand bunch in those days," Arlie tells you. "Some of them were nuts—but who isn't? One way or another. I can look back and see 'em now—Bid McPhee—Heiny Peitz, Red Ehret, Tony Mullane—all the others."

"In those days a pitcher who didn't work in 60 or 70 games, maybe more, must have lost both arms."

Connie the Bat-Tipper

"Do you remember Connie Mack?" I asked.

"Connie was younger than I was," Arlie said, "but I remember him. I'd call him the Bill Dickey of 60 years ago as a catcher, but he couldn't hit within a mile of Dickey. Connie was only a fair hitter. But he was the best bat-tipper I ever saw. The batter would be all set to swing at a fast one coming in—and then miss the ball two feet and start a young war. Connie had tipped his bat with a fast-working hand. His idea was to win the ball game, any way he could, and the umpires were not so strict in those days. Connie was always smart."

"Don't forget those old timers could play a lot of baseball," Arlie said. "Baseball was their life. There were no motor cars in those days, no motion pictures, no radios."

"There was nothing for them but baseball—and not too much cash. Do you remember the time Larry Lajoie, then with the Phillies, batting .400, held out for $2,500? So did Ed Deleahanty, one of the greatest hitters I ever saw. Lajoie and Deleahanty could hit for me."

The main point is that Arlie Latham at 84, a veteran who can look back over 60 years, even beyond the days of Connie Mack and Matt Winn and Lonnie Stagg, 39 years before Ty Cobb or Babe Ruth were even born, is still hale, hearty and

HOW many people can name the champions of three of the eight boxing divisions recognized by the National Boxing association?

It probably wouldn't be an exaggeration to say that a maximum of one in ten persons could name more than one champion—Joe Louis, heavyweight titlist for the duration. More than 4,000 professional boxers are in the services, suggesting that there was more real fighting out of the ring than in it during 1943. The Boxing Writers association emphasized this fact in awarding its boxer-of-the-year prize, the Eddie Neil Memorial trophy, to all the fist fighters in the services en masse.

Four champions were in the service throughout the year—Joe Louis, heavyweight; Gus Lesnevich, light heavy; Tony Zale, middleweight; and Red Cochrane, welterweight. A fifth, Willie Pep, went in after defending his featherweight title successfully.

JOE LOUIS

Boxing Not Dormant

Despite the lack of manpower, boxing wasn't dormant during the year. With most of the titles frozen for the duration, there still was championship activity in two divisions—lightweight and bantamweight—after Pep joined the navy. Beau Jack, recognized as lightweight kingpin by New York and New Jersey at the beginning of the year, lost the crown in May to Bob Montgomery of Philadelphia. At that time Pennsylvania granted similar recognition to its home talent. Jack regained the title from Montgomery in November. As yet Pennsylvania has not withdrawn recognition despite the unquestioned heartbreak.

The lightweight title, however, was disputed by Sammy Angott, who had given it up in 1942 but came back in March and later was recognized as champion by the National Boxing association after beating Luther White in Los Angeles.

Diminutive Manuel Ortiz, California-born Mexican, was the busiest champion of the year, defending his bantamweight crown eight times, chiefly in his home state. The flyweight title, only one not held by an American, was defended successfully by Jackie Patterson in England.

Upsets were far from infrequent during the past year—as the form players will testify. Willie Pep's 62-bout winning streak was halted abruptly by Angott in a non-title bout. Ray Robinson, welterweight chief, won 41 straight and then was floored and outpointed by Jake LaMotta in Detroit. He reversed this setback before going into the army.

Surprise Factor

The LaMotta incident shared the surprise factor with Heavyweight Lee Savold's defeat by Eddie Blunt, reversed in two weeks with a one-round knockout. Then, too, there was Bobby Ruffin's victory over Jack before the Beau regained his title.

Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland Negro, was one of the toughest heavyweights in action, beating everything in sight. Yet he was considered lucky to win a hotly disputed decision over Lee Murray of South Norwalk, Conn. Murray was one of the year's best newcomers.

Hammerin' Henry Armstrong, former three-way champion, completed a successful financial comeback program and had the good grace to retire after a rather deplorable showing against Ray Robinson. But even now there's a rumor that Henry will try it again.

There have been far too many short-sighted "Comebacks"—in past years. Most has-beens should be content to remain in that state—for their own good, if not for the public's.

Heavy Profits

That there was a lot of fight left in the industry was proved by the fact that more fight clubs operated at a profit than ever before. Boxing thrived financially in many large and small cities throughout the country. Of 29 shows promoted by Mike Jacobs in Madison Square Garden, 13 drew $45,000 and up, 6 drew $70,000. The top gate was $101,973 for Jack vs. Armstrong. The year shows averaged $12,000 better than in 1942.

and BETTER CLEANING, LONGER LIFE and EXTRA QUALITY TOO!

WITH food production one of our most important war production programs, you need the tractor tire which gives—Extra Pulling Power In All Soil Conditions.

That tire is the Firestone Ground Grip. Here's why:

The Firestone Ground Grip is the only tractor tire that has a patented tread design which provides up to 215 extra inches of traction bar length per tractor, providing a full traction bite, greater drawbar pull—and less fuel is used.

The Firestone Ground Grip is the only tractor tire that has the triple-braced tread design. There are no broken bars in the tread to cause traction leaks which make the tire slip and spin.

The Firestone Ground Grip is the only tractor tire that has a scientifically designed tread with tapered bars at just the right angle for the tread to clean automatically as it pulls. And Vitamic Rubber provides longer life by resisting the action of the sun and the weather.

No wonder Firestone Ground Grip tires are first choice of farmers everywhere! No other tire has these exclusive extra values—and they cost no more than ordinary tires. See your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Store today and get the tires that give you most for your money.

Listen to the Voice of Firestone with Richard Crooks and the Firestone Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Howard Barlow, Monday evenings, over N. B. C.
